ABSTRACT

Uzbekistan, as an equal subject of international relations, has established an active foreign policy at the regional and global level and is developing mutually beneficial relations with foreign partners. Such consistent, clear and constructive foreign policy is recognized by international experts and observers. Good neighborly relations with the countries of Central Asia and legal, political, and spiritual solidarity play a key role in the cooperation between the countries. In recent years, strengthened mutual trust, good neighborliness and cooperative relations in the region have become an important factor in achieving positive results in the legal, political, trade-economic, cultural-humanitarian spheres. For example, due to the determined efforts of Uzbekistan, agreements were reached with neighboring countries on all current issues, including the delimitation and demarcation of state borders and the rational use of water resources. In addition, the fact that the legal system of the Central Asian countries was formed on the basis of the Romano-Germanic system creates a suitable basis for their future plans. Moreover, it is natural that the manifestation, change, and improvement of the state and law have their own characteristics in the conditions of reforms and modernization taking place in the construction of the state and society.

In recent years, strengthened mutual trust, good neighborliness and cooperative relations in the region have become an important factor in achieving positive results in the legal, political, trade-economic, cultural-humanitarian spheres. For example, due to the determined efforts of Uzbekistan, agreements were reached with neighboring countries on all current issues, including the delimitation and demarcation of state borders and the rational use of water resources. In addition, the fact that the legal system of the Central Asian countries was formed on the basis of the Romano-Germanic system creates a suitable basis for their future plans. Moreover, it is natural that the manifestation, change, and improvement of the state and law have their own characteristics in the conditions of reforms and modernization taking place in the construction of the state and society.

Therefore, the renewed Constitution of the Republic of Uzbekistan, current laws, the historical legal heritage, legal values and traditions of our people, as well as several priority ideas such as the establishment of a legal state and civil society put forward as the goal of our society, all Central Asian countries has become the main slogan for This, in its place, creates a harmony of mutual goals. Today's Uzbek society is rediscovering such fundamental concepts as "social-legal state", "human dignity", "freedom of speech", "pluralism" [1:12].

The countries of Central Asia are becoming more integrated day by day in all respects. It is known that one of the main tasks of Uzbekistan's foreign policy is to create an atmosphere of peace, stability and security around its territory. From this point of view, President Shavkat Mirziyoyev defined the development and strengthening of friendly, close-neighborly and mutually beneficial relations with our neighbors - the countries of Central Asia - as the main priority foreign policy direction.

The dynamics of friendly dialogue with Central Asian countries can be divided into 2 stages. These are: the period from 2017 to 2020 and the period from 2020 to the present. Period 1 includes several political and legal situations, one of which we can see is the widespread spread of the coronavirus infection around the world, and as a result, thousands of people have died. He paid special attention to ensuring socio-political stability in the country and maintaining strong relations with the countries of the region and the countries of the world even in the period of such global crisis risks. President Shavkat Mirziyoyev has become one of the leading leaders of the Central Asian countries with his innovative plans and progressive ideas. As a proof of this, we can take an example of advanced initiatives to ensure sustainable development of the region, combating threats related to climate change.

This document at the international level reflects the rapid and cooperative efforts of the states to deal with the dangerous situation. The following objective factors once again demonstrate the importance of this international programming document.

First of all, in today's trying times, the provision and protection of human rights is at great risk. It is natural that the lack of consistent implementation of the international aid and cooperation program at the global level creates serious problems in the full implementation of economic, social and cultural rights in many countries [4:2].

Secondly, one of the main problems of the current crisis is the continuous supply of necessary food and medicine to the population. It is important that participating countries ensure that the right to health is taken into account in international treaties.

At the heart of this is the strengthening of friendly relations between the countries of Central Asia, which is directly related to the peace and well-being of the region. The fact that the countries of Central Asia are also mutual partners in several major issues serves the future of the countries. It is no exaggeration to say that it is the achievement of these countries that they have a mutually compatible legal system. To sum up, firstly, the good neighborly relations of New Uzbekistan with the countries of Central Asia serve as an important factor not only for our country, but also for the development of neighboring countries; secondly, the initiatives of the President of Uzbekistan at the regional level are strengthening the position of our country in the region and at the same time at the global level. This plays an important role for the all-round development of our country.
